Strategies and tactics are an important aspect of being a fire officer. However, there is more to the position than the successful outcome of an incident. This class will take a comprehensive look at the personal tools needed to be a successful fire officer both on and off the scene. Topics will focus on refining the abilities of current and future fire officers through better scene management, better communication, proper etiquette, and conflict resolution in difficult situations. This class is free, but participants need to register through SMOKE to reserve a seat.

You do not need to be a fire officer to attend.
